The Town That Fooled The British

St. Michael's derived its name from the Episcopalian Parish established here in 1679, which was named after St. Michael the Archangel. Both the name of the town and the church were officially referred to as St. Michaels, although in 1675 William Throckmorton of Burlington named the river "Mayer" river.

The first land grant given in 1666 was "The Head", fifty acres covering the present boundary line of St. Michaels. Other grants quickly followed: "Station", fifty acres, patented in 1669 by Christopher Spurrier from the Mill River to what is now called Back Creek (San Domingo Tract). In 1671, "Deversort" was granted, the present site of Perry Cabin Farm.

The immediate clearing of dense forests created two major industries: the growing of tobacco and the building of ships. The St. Michaels Episcopal Church attracted some settlers, but it was not until 1765 that the first Revolutionary War battle, the Battle of Back Creek, was fought. The church was burned and the buildings were destroyed.

On the night of August 10, 1783, a number of British boats, manned by marines, shelled the town and attacked a fort on the Battery side. Resistant, however, a British surrender to the main of ships and in the top of the town causing the capture to overlook the town. The town then known as "The Town That Fooled The British."

Boundaries in 1804 and 1826, the town was laid out to three squares: Atrim's Square in the north, Thompson's Square in the middle, and Block's Square to the west. The first point of the latter was designed at St. Mary's Square, an area where churches, schools, and a town market were established.

During the years that followed, St. Michaels continued as a boating and shipping center along with the harvest and processing of clams and oysters. Seashore, curio, and tamarind were shipped to Annapolis and Baltimore. With the coming of the railroad in 1850, "The Town That Fooled The British" was built by land and sea.

Since 1961, when St. Michaels celebrated its Sesquicentennial of the 'Battle with the British,' it has been "environmental." The town offers a quiet charm and a safe, peaceful haven for a day, weekend, or vacation to visit the historic streets and museums. Some restaurants and interesting shops add to the ambiance, making St. Michaels a visitor's delight.

Historic Sites of St. Michaels

A. MOORE'S LIGHTHOUSE. Built in 1870, this historic-style, steeple lighthouse—one of only three remaining in the United States—is located in the Bay. It is open to the public and includes a gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop, gift shop.

B. ST. MARY'S SQUARE.MUSEUM. Circa 1803, originally part of a storm and grain mill, the "Tavern" building, named because of its resemblance to the key top of the same name serves as a display area. It is open to the public.

C. CANNONBALL HOUSE. Circa 1805. During the War of 1812, a cannonball penetrated the wall, causing damage to the interior. The house is open to the public.

D. HILL'S CROSSING. The historic site of a battle, Hill's Crossing is marked by a plaque.

E. THE CABIN HOUSE. This 'Southern style' house stands today as a reminder of the past.

F. THE CANNON. These cannons are replicas of the two cannon on the wall of the town of St. Michaels in 1719 by Jacob Gibson as a work of art after a miscalculation during the "War between the States."

G. THE COTTAGE. Home of slavemaster Robert Lambdin and his descendants for generations.
